GLC VANDALS

"GLC leave us alone! GLC makes people homeless: Carmel's Commune provides homes. Political refugees of the Tory GLC", claimed the banners of a group of Hackney men and women demonstrating outside the Courts of Justice in the Strand on Friday 23rd June.

Inside the court the GLC were trying to get a possession order to evict all fifty of them. They are residents of Carmel's Commune, a hostel in Lansdowne Drive and this was the latest round in the prolonged fight between them and the GLC.

In the last issue we told the story of the victory won by Carmel's Commune at the DHSS Tribunal on 12 April. On 15 June Carmel Carter had 31 summonses tipped from a postman's bag onto her desk. The GLC had at last moved to get possession of the houses, having failed by other less legal means. In a frantic effort to get legal aid, affidavits and all the papers together for her law lawyers in the one week given, she told us she did not know how much more she or the other could take.

While angry and anxious residents demonstrated outside the court

Anti-Nazi meeting disrupted

The first meeting of the North West Hackney Anti-Nazi League on Monday 19 June was disrupted when invaded by an organised gang of twenty-five who arrived waving Anti-Nazi League membership cards as though they were worried that they could not be let in.

The first indication that the new arrivals were racists intent on disrupting the meeting came when someone in the meeting reminded those present of the racist attacks which have taken place in that area (see HPP March 1978). A number of the newly arrived gang sniggered and after that there was continual interruption of speakers.

One of the National Front members claimed "We're here because we're anti-Nazis too", but during the meeting people present had their own chance to judge whether the NF are Nazis.

After someone had the cheek to ask a question of one of the NF members, he was told "Shut your mouth, or you'll get done, you fat slob."

Commenting on the murderers of Altab Ali (police are looking for two white and one West Indian youths) they said "We've got them doing OUR WORK for us now", an admission that he saw the work of the NF as being to go round performing racist attacks and murders.

"We don't care about Enoch Powell" - a remark that implied that Powell isn't extreme enough. Their racism was also exposed when a local Jewish resident spoke and received a lot of abuse, and also when a donation from a local synagogue was announced, the jeering and animal-like baying from the NF members reminded me with a horrible jolt of the ways the Nazis used to manipulate the minds of their members.

Another NF member, when asked what he thought of some of the statements made by NF leaders said "I don't care much about the NF. I'm in Column 88". (Although this is very unlikely to be true, it shows what he aspires to...) Column 88 is the secret extremist group, responsible for recent parcel bombs, including one sent to a High Wycombe bus driver.

The NF claimed that the meeting was run by the Socialist Workers Party. That statement is not true. Groups represented at the meeting included Stoke Newington Council of Churches, Brownswood Labour Party, Hackney Youth Workers Group, Hackney National Union of Teachers, Hackney Communist Party, various local churches and synagogues, Hackney Women's Voice, Woodberry Down Tenants' Association and Hackney Socialist Workers Party.

Towards the end of the meeting it was suggested that we should produce a leaflet which answered the questions asked by the NF people there, such as "Blacks take up houses which could rehouse whites, don't they?"

But there are at least 3,500 empty properties in Hackney and in Glasgow there are 27,000 homeless people, but hardly any blacks living in Glasgow. But the NF members at the meeting declined to contribute to such a leaflet answering the questions which they themselves had asked at the meeting. Therefore only one conclusion can be drawn from this: that the NATIONAL FRONT EXISTS BY DEPENDING ON LIES.

There would almost certainly have been violence at the meeting but for the prompt arrival soon after the Nazis, of an assortment of anti-racists in response to hurried phone calls. Last to arrive were the police. The National Front were frustrated by not being able to break up the meeting by violence and responded in two ways. Firstly, on their way back to Hoxton the gang of Nazis started to intimidate passers-by along Green Lanes, and the police were forced to intervene to protect three young black girls who were being threatened.

Secondly, three days after the meeting, the vicar of St Olaf's, Peter Jameson, received a threatening phone call saying that his church hall (where the meeting had been held) was going to be burned down.

The Nazis were probably frustrated also because they had failed in their task to stop the meeting. Although they did disrupt it, the following decisions were reached:

1. To pursue a campaign of education to show people that the National Front are Nazis, which will include leafletting and discussion meetings.
2. To organise a public paint-out of racist and fascist slogans.
3. To hold a multifaith service to proclaim our joint opposition to racism and fascism.

A collection after the meeting raised £23.

The new Hackney South and Shoreditch Anti-Nazi League carried out its first public paint-out of racist slogans in the Queensbridge and Haggerston areas on Saturday 24 June.

Mayor Sam Cohen painted out the first slogan under Middleton Road railway bridge and about fifty other people carried on for most of the afternoon.

They ended up back at the railway bridge with a ladder and painted out the huge slogan which has defiled the bridge for so long.

A public meeting is to be arranged in South Hackney soon. Meanwhile an East London Anti-Nazi League meeting is to be held at Poplar Civic Centre, Bow Road, on Tuesday 4 July at 7.30 pm.

GLC VANDALS AND CARMEL'S COMMUNE

their Counsel read through a mass of evidence in front of the GLC representatives and the Judge.

The Judge, who had been led to expect a straightforward possession order case with a simple decision on amount of time before eviction, said, at the end of it: "Why was this case brought before me in this way? I am not in a position to make a judgement. Why was there no adjournment?" The Counsel for Carmel's Commune said: "Oh, your Honour, I asked the complainant (GLC) twice to adjourn but they refused."

The case was adjourned either until the end of July or October. A breathing space and smiles all round for Carmel and all who live in the "Commune".

The GLC's Notice to Quit expired on 3 January. But the GLC itself took no action. Instead they put pressure on the DHSS to attempt to bankrupt the project, as a quieter way of finishing it off.

The DHSS officers in Bonhill Street under "instructions" had cut by £9.30 per week the Giro of those residents on Supplementary Benefit. The residents lodged an appeal on the grounds that the houses in Lansdowne Drive and Ivydene Road were being managed on exactly the same basis as before, providing four meals a day, light, heat, TV, cleaning, maintenance and administration. No change in management, they claimed, should mean no change in board and lodging charge.

TEST-CASE

They had been advised to put forward one test case to be heard by the Appeals Tribunal. John Wilton was their test case, but twenty other residents lodged appeals formally on the same basis. However, when John Wilton won his case, the DHSS did not take this as applying to all the others. The old rate of Giro was not paid to John Wilton or to any of the other twenty at first, nor to any of the other more recently arrived residents. Nor were the arrears paid.

What has happened, when the DHSS heard of the Tribunal's decision, was that they failed to challenge it in Court within the required four weeks. They had delayed correcting payments for that time but having failed, they knew they would have to pay the old, higher rate of Giro to the twenty others, plus Mr Wilton. But they issued instructions not to pay it to any of the other residents until they appealed, individually. (Thus causing convenient tension among residents?)

Carmel Carter and the residents took this up at a higher level through their solicitors with the DHSS Legal Department and threatened to take the DHSS to High Court for not carrying out their legal obligations.

When challenged strongly with the facts of the case, they stated that they had been under a misapprehension that the nature of the hostel management had changed. One of their staff said she thought they were some kind of "hippy commune". The interesting question is, who planted this misapprehension in their minds, since their officers at Bonhill Street have known the project intimately from the start and have been engaging in regular arguments with Mrs Carter and her committee on this very point for months.

With their backs to the wall, they agreed on 9 June to pay the correct Giro and the arrears. Nevertheless the arrears (a very sizeable sum) have not yet been paid. They are allowed to be held up at some regional office. No doubt pending a Court decision on the possession order on Friday, which they hoped would suit the GLC.

Having failed to bankrupt the project by this means, through the DHSS - that 'Independent' authority - the GLC in the meantime turned to using its own resources, its own wrecker squads. With monstrous vandalism they broke into 8 Ivydene Road on 25 May, tore out the windows, the plumbing and the wiring. The house was unoccupied while decorations had been in progress for about three weeks. There was a scene when Carmel Carter called the police but the GLC proceeded with boarding up the house the next day, although it was under the same licence to the project as all their other houses, pending a possession order. HPP rang up the GLC Press Office and asked on what grounds they had taken this action. They claimed that they had thought the house was abandoned. Asked whether it had been reported as abandoned by local people, they replied: "No, there had been no reports from the local community, but GLC officers had happened to be in the area and felt it was abandoned, and reported it."

Mrs Carter and her committee have made various attempts to meet the requirements set out by the GLC. They have registered as a company, so that they are now a proper legal entity. They are proceeding with registering as a charity and trying to register as a housing association. They have invited various outside people onto their management committee to bring in more expertise and have offered to co-operate with the GLC and take advice and help from them.

What they are not willing to do is to hand over their home to someone else to take over and manage. They have offered to buy the houses, or some others. It seems, however, that whatever the GLC say about their policies in general, they are not going to apply them to Carmel's Commune in particular.

The Tory GLC policy is to encourage people to buy their own homes - except for Carmel's Commune. They are offering Council tenants the chance to purchase their homes and have announced their "homesteading" scheme, "as an active encouragement to people to make their own contribution ..."

PREJUDICE

The Broadway Market Squatters Group, just along the road from Carmel's Commune, are forming a housing co-operative and are being encouraged to buy their houses. Yet Mrs Carter has a copy of an internal GLC memo saying: "Don't make a decision on the Squatters' Group yet as it will prejudice our chances of getting Carmel's Commune out."

The GLC have long since realised that Carmel Carter's main strength derives from the support of the residents. They also realise that they are not all a stable community but a changing one. Many are referred by social workers, probation officers and so on, some come off the streets, some only stay for a while. However, over half the places are taken by people who like the place, choose to stay there and share in the running of it. Some of these have been there for two or three years, others for one year or less. It is these people whom the GLC offered to rehouse if they did not want to stay under a different management imposed by the GLC. Some offers were made and about nine accepted. What they were offered was slum accommodation, undecorated, in a filthy state, several of them with no water and one or two had to wait weeks for the basic services to be switched on. This only served to toughen the determination of the rest to stay in Lansdowne Drive and fight it out. Several of them, both elderly and young, would never want to have to live on their own anyway, and this has been their first real home for years. Finding suitable accommodation for them in a group would take a very long time. They are asking to be allowed to be rehoused as a group, if they are finally hounded out of their present home.

Local homes raided after 'bombing' claim

Officers from the police anti-terrorist squad have carried out a bizarre series of raids on the homes of anarchists and anarchist sympathisers in north and north east London recently. This action comes in the wake of the "conspiracy to cause explosion" charges which have been recently preferred against three people, Ronan Bennett, Iris Mills and Dafydd Ladd. The press has made a meal out of the raids, following the police claim that a "bomb-wave" had been planned by a "loose-knit" group of anarchists. The fact that there have been no explosions has been ignored.

When the police visited a house in Grosvenor Avenue, Highbury, the home of HPP's former printer, they battered the door down with a sledgehammer before even giving the occupants a chance to open it. Ironically, in doing so they jammed the door and it then took them a quarter of an hour to get in. All they took from the house were three photograph albums, despite going to the extent of ripping up the floorboards.

Further raids have included three visits to a house in Forest Road, Hackney, whose occupants said only that the raids were "fucking stupid", and visits to houses in Finsbury Park and Hornsey. The police have also visited the Bow house where Jim Paton, the organiser of the Aubrey/Berry/Campbell Defence Campaign, used to live. Arriving at 6 am they included two German-speaking officers who questioned a German man staying at the house. "Do you know any of the Baader-Meinhof gang?" they asked casually. "No", came the reply. "Oh", the police said, "that's a different firm, is it?" Paton went voluntarily to the police the next day with a solicitor. When he refused to answer personal questions, the officers gave up.

Meanwhile the three charged with conspiracy are still on remand in Brixton prison. Iris Mills is the only woman in the prison, and, of course, is not allowed to see the other prisoners. They are still handcuffed to police when they make their weekly court appearances despite the fact that the police said that no explosives had been found in the flat, but there had been weedkiller. Detective Inspector Bradbury said that this "could" be used to make explosives. He had also found "other items" but he would not tell the court what they were. Perhaps they were packets of Tampax, which were confiscated by the anti-terrorist squad in a raid in 1974 on the grounds that they "could be used as bomb fuses".

Further arrests have still not been made, despite the earlier police scare tactics, and claims that they were involved in armed robberies have still not been substantiated. Even journalists are being locked in the Press box at the magistrates court whenever the three appear.

A support group has been formed and is organising pickets outside Brixton every Saturday. They can be contacted at Persons Unknown, Box 123, 182 Upper Street, London N1.

THREAT TO NURSERIES AND PLAYGROUPS

If teachers were paid on the basis of their pupils' attendance there would be an outcry. But this is exactly what the Council want to do with the Community Nurseries and the thirty voluntary playgroups who care for those under fives in the borough not in council care. This would mean that if numbers should fall for any reason - an outbreak of measles for example - the grant to these desperately needed facilities would be reduced.

People who work in these places would have no job security which would probably lead to a high turnover of staff - as everybody knows, children that young need security, and that means being able to form stable relationships with the adults that care for them. This way of funding would not provide security.

Playgroups would find it very difficult to plan ahead for such things as play equipment. Because of this it is very likely that fees would go up (despite the poorer quality of care) for some groups to survive financially.

This will concern you - if you have a child in a Community Nursery or a playgroup, or if you are concerned at the short-sightedness of Hackney Council in their attempt to cut back in provision for under fives, or if you believe that children in Hackney should get the best possible playgroups and nurseries instead of second best.

On Tuesday 4 July the Social Services Committee will be deciding on this issue, 'per capita' as it is called, and hopefully they will decide against it.

The Hackney Under Fives Group is taking no chances, however, and they are organising a demonstration outside the Town Hall on that day. If it does go through, they urge all HPP readers to join the campaign against it.

Hackney lets Let Live live

Hackney Council has refused to reconsider its decision to allow the anti-abortion group, Let Live, to open a hostel in Hackney. The Council Housing Management Committee was tied 8-8 in a vote to change the decision made last autumn, first published in HPP, but the Chairperson Charles Cable gave his casting vote against the motion.

The Anti-Let Live group which had been formed to present a deputation to the Committee meeting had told the Committee that the needs of single pregnant women are not being met in Hackney. Especially needed are facilities for young homeless pregnant women and a proper support system for one-parent families. The Council should be responsible for good housing, counselling and nurseries. Let Live was to be allowed to be the only organisation which could set up a hostel for homeless pregnant women. The deputation told the Committee about Let Live's links with anti-abortion groups, especially SPUC, the Society for the Protection of the Unborn Child, and said that even though Let Live had claimed that it would not try and influence pregnant women not to have abortions. Though if they wanted them it was too biased not to do so. A more responsible stance for the Council to take would have been to support extension of the day-care abortion service in Tower Hamlets or Hackney.

Because the motion was lost the Anti-Let Live group will picket both the June Labour Group and Council meetings, and is planning a large public meeting for the end of July. Further details in future issues of HPP.

WANTED: more law centres

The Labour Party in its manifesto has declared its commitment to the establishment of two further Law Centres in the borough. Hackney's Legal Action Group invited all of Hackney's councillors to a meeting on 20 June at the Town Hall to discuss the implementation of this commitment.

The unmet need for legal services in an area with the problems which Hackney faces is now widely recognised. The proportion of private solicitors in the borough per head of the population is very low. Problems such as bad housing, harassment, unfair dismissal, complaints against the police and social security problems are not to extend their involvement outside the Centre and take a greater part in community activities, but at present the very small number of staff limits expansion in both of these areas.

The experience of the Law Centre and the six voluntary legal advice sessions in the borough all indicate that there remains a need for the establishment of at least two additional Law Centres in different parts of the borough. Fifteen councillors attended the meeting on 20 June and discussed how the commitment in the manifesto could be made a reality. It was felt that only by concerted pressure would the Council be persuaded to provide the normally dealt with by private solicitors, and the Legal Aid system does not in general extend to this type of case.

Hackney Law Centre opened in May 1976 in a tripartite centre consisting of the Citizens Advice Bureau, Consumer Advice Centre and Law Centre. The Law Centre deals primarily with case-work in the fields of housing and employment. The Law Centre workers would like to extend their work to cover, in particular, cases involving immigration problems and child care proceedings. Both of these areas of law are usually important in Hackney and at present there are inadequate facilities for dealing with them. The Law Centre would also like additional financial resources which are needed. All local groups such as tenants' associations, and all individuals who would welcome the establishment of a law centre in their area should put pressure on their local councillor for action now.

The Council may well now consider that they have dealt with the problem adequately by making provision for one Law Centre. It should be remembered however that there are at present only two solicitors at the Law Centre and 200,000 people in Hackney. It is up to the people in Hackney to ensure that their Council provides them with the kind of legal services they need. Start campaigning now!

Children in hospital

Did you know that nearly half of all children under seven will spend at least one night in hospital? Or that, of these, 60% will be admitted as emergencies?

The Hackney Association for the Welfare of Children in Hospital aims to help parents in the preparation of their children for a stay in hospital, and to bridge the gap between hospital and home. They provide an information service for parents, books for children concerning doctors, dentists, and hospitals from 15p upwards, an accommodation list of people who will put parents up overnight, free of charge, and speakers for organisations who wish to know more about the Association.

HAWCH also campaigns for the universal acceptance of unrestricted visiting for children in hospitals, accommodation in hospitals for mothers of young children, more child-orientated accident and outpatient facilities, play programmes in all children's wards, improved long-term care for the handicapped child and financial assistance for parents who cannot afford to visit their child in hospital. In addition, last year they raised £1,600 to pay for an extra playworker at the Queen Elizabeth Hospital for Children.

One of HAWCH's current projects is the making of toy-kits which can be easily handed out by nurses and play workers and donations of toys, clothes, materials, buttons, comics, books etc are always appreciated. The Association also welcomes help from people interested in this important subject. Volunteers can contact Jan Burnell, tel 800 9218 or Stefanie Bowman, tel 806 5826

ANTI-NAZI APPEAL

A fire bomb attack on the Anti-Nazi League's Central London office has resulted in thousands of pounds' worth of damage. The building was broken into on the night of Friday 23 June and set alight. 'NF rules OK - Jim, Chris and Jill' was found scrawled on one of the walls, which indicates that the blaze was started by infuriated NF supporters, angry at the effect the Anti-Nazi League's work has had on their recent election votes.

Hackney South and Shoreditch Anti-Nazi League has set itself a target of £500 to be raised to pay for some of the damage caused. Please send your donations now to Hackney South and Shoreditch Anti-Nazi League, c/o Oxford House, Derbyshire Street, E2.

"It makes sense, that's why they won't do it"

Once again tenants on a pre-War GLC estate are complaining that their estate needs proper modernisation, not the deal that the GLC is offering. Dot Mbeki, of Stamford Hill Estate Tenants' Association, explains what their complaints are.

Who can blame Hackney Council for not wanting Stamford Hill Estate? The GLC doesn't want it either, nor do the people who live there think much of it. For years the GLC has let the Estate deteriorate, ignoring maintenance ... repairs ... damp. The rubbish disposal system is antiquated and inadequate, and the GLC has no plans to do anything about it. Five storey blocks with no lifts - and no plans to do anything about that either. Of course, there just might be some plans, only the GLC doesn't bother to inform us (we only live here) what they have in mind, let alone ask us what we want.

Most of the tenants are here by choice all the same, a few because they have roots in the area, or gave up trying to move out years ago. Very many because their only other choice was the hostel or bed and breakfast scene. Very many are on the transfer list - and have been for years. It's not much fun for anyone, and the older tenants want peace and quiet while the kids want to play. And the only social amenity for anyone on the Estate of nearly 600 flats is a patch of asphalt. No wonder the kids ignore the 'No Ball Games' notices - they can't all get on that patch. And no wonder that the elderly and the sick object to balls banging against their walls and sometimes through their windows. The little kids can't go out at all of course because of the dangers of the traffic.

The GLC has found a brilliant solution. It proposes a "Club Room" on that one and only play area. We badly need a Community Hall, but not here. We need more and proper play grounds. Bang in the middle of the Estate is a large depot owned by Hackney Council and used as a garage, causing quite a noise nuisance. The Tenants' Association has approached Hackney Council with a view to getting the depot converted into a Community Hall, or better still, pulled down and a new Hall built with a play ground attached. Our Ward councillors have promised to fight for us on this, and we have to make sure that all the councillors do. Let's see if they can prove the worker in the depot wrong when he said: "It makes sense - that's why they won't do it." We can't afford to lose this battle. After all, what sort of community can we build when there's nowhere to meet up and nowhere for the kids to play without the tensions increasing? We're not only gunning for the depot though; the need for social amenities is too urgent.

It's not all the fault of the GLC - morale on the Estate has been low, and the Tenants' Association revived only recently. You don't get anything unless you fight for it, and hoping for a transfer you won't get isn't much of a solution. It was the GLC which helped to revive the Association - by offering a "modernisation" deal so inadequate it has been a catalyst bringing us together to fight for all the things the deal ignores. The "modernisation" deal is of course inspired by the GLC's desire, under the leadership of private property dealer Horace Cutler, to hive off its sub-standard pre-War Estates. What does it mean? A facelift on the interiors of the flats.

RATS AND MAGGOTS

So presumably we are supposed to cook in our gleaming new kitchens whilst the rats and maggots breed in the rubbish chutes. And on top of the rent increase demanded in return for the facelift we can expect rocketing fuel bills because central heating is to be installed whilst the windows are to be left as they are - ill-fitting and with rotting frames. Double glazing? - Who do we think we are? ... And don't bother to enclose the pipes, or tile the floors of the concrete passages - it would increase the cost of the deal with the contractors. The GLC is making every effort to do away with direct labour - it's unionised. Instead it farms out work to private, profit-making contractors. That's when it's not busy selling off the property of the people.

We're barraging the GLC with demands - and one demand they've already conceded: we're to have an overflow on the bath after all! (Yes, we do all have bathrooms already, though some flats have no wash basin and tenants have to wash and shave in the kitchen). Maybe it's a bit unfair to think the lack of an overflow in the plans indicated a certain indifference for our safety ... maybe they just haven't got rid of the habits of mind which made their forefathers argue it was pointless to give workers baths - they'd only put coal in them. Back in 1934 the LCC implemented a policy of no overflows on the baths because they'd provide transit routes for the bugs bred by the lower orders.

We've got a fight on our hands to get anything beyond this facelift. Let's hope Hackney Council will spell out its requirements for the improvement of such estates before they'll take them over - and make them high. Not just for the interiors of the flats, but at least as importantly for the amenities for the Estate as a whole.

On Thursday 18 July at 8 pm, tenants from Stamford Hill will be meeting Councillor Ken Livingstone at County Hall. Any other GLC tenants in Hackney are welcome to attend.

Photo: Hammer

This is where the G.L.C. want to build a "Club Room" - on the only play area serving the 600 flats of the Stamford Hill estate. The Tenants' Association want a Community Hall, but not here.

Last week at Highbury Corner Magistrates' Court there were two appearances in which the defendants applied for bail and were refused. They were therefore held in prison to await their cases.

CANNABIS CHARGES

The first case was that of a couple in their twenties who had been arrested on various charges of possessing and growing cannabis and were pleading not guilty. They had already been in custody for some weeks and were applying for bail. The girl's mother was prepared to place herself as surety for her, and to offer all her savings as surety, which included her £15,000 flat. The girl was willing to live with her mother and realised that if she did not appear in court her mother would be in danger of losing a great deal. Despite this, bail was refused and the couple were taken back to prison until at least next week, and probably longer. This was purely because the policeman who arrested them objected to bail.

OBJECTION TO BAIL

The second case was that of a woman in her thirties who had committed several thefts and had admitted to them. The arresting officer was objecting to bail because he said that the woman had missed court appearances on several occasions. In fact, the woman had been ill each time and had produced doctor's certificates. The police conceded this, but said that they still felt that this woman would deliberately stay away from court if she were not kept in prison. The arresting officer also said that he knew that she is very unlikely to leave her home, and in his own words: "I could go and arrest her at any time", but still objected to bail.

SON RAN AWAY

The reason why the woman wanted bail was because of her two sons, aged 14 and 11. The 14-year old had run away from his boarding school when he realised that his mother was in prison. He had been so upset on the day before her court appearance that he had taken a serious overdose of Valium. He was refusing to go back to school until his mother left prison, and was in danger of losing his place at the school if he did not return on the following day. This was ironic because the mother was saying that the reason for all her thefts had been to make money to send her sons away to school to "save them from growing up into Hoxton thugs". Her other son was being looked after by friends. This woman was also refused bail.

POLICE OPPOSE BAIL

These were not dramatic cases, and similar bail applications take place every day in every magistrates' court. They were, however, typical, because almost every time the police oppose bail, it is refused. The law instructs over magistrates to judge impartially. In practice they are seen to be swayed by the wishes of the police. Judgement then is made on the streets and not in the courts, and is therefore accountable to no-one.

The depot owned by Hackney Council which the Tenants' Association suggest could be converted into a Community Hall.

CUTS DRESSED UP AS PROGRESS

The NE Thames Regional Health Authority, which controls the NHS in the borough, has at last published its plans for the new hospital which is to be built on the site presently occupied by the Eastern. Originally this new hospital was going to be a large district hospital, which would fully serve the needs of the borough. Now, it seems that this will not be so - once again Hackney is to be palmed off with less hospital beds and reduced services. Below, a doctor from the Hackney Hospital reviews the new plans.

For more than ten years we have been waiting for building to start on a new big hospital which will serve the needs of Hackney. Now we have been given what we are told is the "final" plan - and we are not getting the large hospital we hoped for. The new "nucleus" hospital will only have 437 beds (less than the number in the Eastern and the other hospitals which will be closed) and two other small hospitals will be left open as well. Altogether the new hospitals will provide about HALF the service which exists now (as if that wasn't bad enough!)

The proposals are that a new district hospital will be built on the site of the Eastern. This will cater for emergencies and maternities and will contain a few beds for the elderly and for rehabilitation. Hackney Hospital and St Leonard's will be converted to community hospitals for the elderly and mentally ill. These will take up a third of the beds needed for these cases - the rest will be treated at St Bartholomews. The kidney unit "may" be located elsewhere in the area, and there is no provision for mentally or physically handicapped children (who "may" have a place at what is now the Mothers "if it can be reopened in the future.")

The plan is a mish-mash of short cuts and cheap ways out of providing a decent health service for the borough. Only 17% of the beds at Barts are filled by people from the area. It is a teaching hospital and provides specialist services for the whole of South East England. People in Hackney; don't want to go to Barts, and it doesn't want any more patients from Hackney. It has consistently refused to take a proper share of the elderly and mentally ill - what's going to change it in the future? If they

chc

The City and Hackney Community Health Council is also angered by the new proposals for the district hospital. The plans are outlined in a so-called 'Discussion Document' issued by the Regional Area Health Authority. But, although so titled, neither the CHC nor any other group in Hackney has been asked to comment on it. The CHC has, however, sent its comments and queries to the Regional Area Health Authority. These are briefly summarised here.

They also question the reduction of maternity and geriatric beds considering the statistical forecasts for Hackney's future needs. They do not favour single speciality units (eg for geriatrics). They question the use of Hackney Hospital for large numbers of psychiatric patients when DHSS recommendations are for small psychiatric units and note that there appears to be no plans for an assessment unit. They are concerned at the lack of provision for the mentally handicapped and the CHC would not support the use of the Mothers Hospital for these patients. The CHC are pressing for the retention of St have to fill 75% of the beds with patients from Hackney then the Health Service in the whole of the region will suffer.

The two "community hospitals" will become dumping grounds for people that are old or inconvenient. It is against all medical and government recommendations to separate geriatric and psychiatric patients from general hospitals. These become "sink" hospitals, and health service workers don't want to go there. We already have a shortage of these people in Hackney's hospitals - why make it even less attractive for them to work there?

As always, the plan is to cut the number of beds in the borough. - by 37%. Once again these cuts take no account of Hackney's problems. The Hackney Hospital has been closed for female admissions at least one day per week every week this year. On a couple of occasions recently every female bed in the hospital has been full for more than a week. Doctors and nurses have had to transfer patients all over the hospital to fit new ones in. Sometimes even this was impossible. At one point in April, there was only one available bed in the whole of Hackney! And they are going to cut the number of beds by 37%.

Why can't we have a decent hospital in Hackney? Because the government has cut back on the money for the Health Service and has also diverted money away from the poorer areas. Because for ten years (or more) the planners have been messing around with bits of paper and putting off the fateful day when spade hits earth for the new hospital. One thing is certain, Hackney people will have to fight for a decent full-sized hospital on one site - no dumps, no short cuts: the real thing.

Leonards Hospital as a property maintained acute hospital with the Renal Dialysis Unit retained there.

Copies of the new plans and the CHC's comments on them can be obtained from the Community Health Council, 210 Kingsland Road, E2.

CHC Meeting

'Health and Safety in Industry' is the subject for the next meeting organised by the City and Hackney Community Health Council. This is particularly relevant in the light of the new Act coming into force in October which gives responsibility for safety in industry to both employer and employee. Sheila McKechnie, Health and Safety Officer for ASTMS, will be speaking at the meeting on Monday 17 July at 7.30 pm at 210 Kingsland Road, E2.

A STAR IS BANNED

Hackney Morning Star Group were banned from having a stall at the Council's bunfight in Clissold Park, the Hackney Show, because it was "too political". The Group was told of this decision on the afternoon before the Show. Steve Scott, Chairperson of the Council Libraries Committee, who made the decision, refused to discuss why he had banned the Star.

Hackney Communist Party said: "Of course the Star is political, like every newspaper. But unlike other national daily newspapers, it is a campaigning socialist paper. This banning goes against democracy."

Councillor Gerry Ross has now written to the Libraries Committee about the ban, and also to express his concern with the way the Hackney Show is run. He told HPP that he would like to see many more voluntary organisations having stalls at the Show, like HPP. (We've never even bothered to apply for a stall!) "At the moment", he said, "the Council puts on a show and everyone walks round and looks at it."

Gerry Ross would also like to see the show moved round Hackney's other parks, Hackney Downs and London Fields especially.

Certainly the Hackney Show is pretty boring. There is much more energy and enthusiasm at the Hackney Marsh Fun Festival (where HPP will have a stall) which is organised by the people of the area. For details of this see page 8.

The Council could also save a lot of money by abandoning the Hackney Show and all the bureaucracy that goes with it. Two council commissioners were on duty all day in a marquee which was reserved for councillors only.

HPP's intrepid staff peered in several times and couldn't see anyone at all inside. Not very surprising, perhaps, that councillors should be loath to be seen sitting at tables with tea served by waitresses when outside their constituents were queuing to buy hamburgers and popcorn from the rip-off merchants usually seen fleecing tourists in the West End.

Last year Grapevine ran for ten weeks on BBC-2 during June, July and August. The idea of the programme was to act as an exchange for information and advice for any individuals or groups involved in self help schemes. The programme covered a wide range including housing co-ops, one-parent family projects, community art groups and mural painting schemes and there was also some advice on fund-raising. Anyone could write in to the programme for information sheets which provided addresses and additional information, so it was possible for them to follow up the ideas in more depth.

THEY WANT TO HEAR FROM ANYONE INVOLVED OR INTERESTED IN SELF HELP PROJECTS...

Most of the subjects covered were as a direct response to letters received from viewers. Grapevine wants to start this sort of communication again, so please write! Among lots of ideas already suggested are community video, credit unions and workers' co-ops. There will also be an item on community newspapers. The next series starts on 10 July on BBC-2.

Grapevine wants to introduce people about to begin self-help schemes to those involved in schemes that are alive and kicking.

So if you have any ideas, suggestions, comments or whatever, write to Grapevine, BBC TV, London W12 8QT.

SHORT-LIFE MOVE

Following the picket of the Council by the Hackney Housing Action Group in May, a meeting was held on 21 June between the Group and Broad Left members of the Housing Development Committee. Ten of the twenty-four Broad Left councillors are on this committee. The Committee itself has sixteen members, so the Broad Left will nearly always be able to achieve a majority. The fact that approaching half of the Broad Left group have been placed on this Committee gives an indication of where their priorities lie - with an improved housing service in the Borough.

The meeting was very productive, with considerable common ground between the two groups. The Housing Action Group will be working to outline proposals for a short life housing section within the Housing Department. The Housing Development Committee has the power to instruct housing officers to take this further and produce a worked out programme for short life property.

HPP has heard from a number of the Council's housing officers that there is a considerable interest in a short life unit that would reduce the thousands of properties left empty in the Borough. Let's hope that the Housing Development Committee and the officers of the Housing Department work together to get a short life section as soon as possible.

BAN THE CANE!

The National Union of School Students will be holding a demonstration against the use of corporal punishment in schools, especially the cane. The demonstration will leave Speakers Corner, Marble Arch on Tuesday 11 July at 5pm and will go to County Hall where GLC councillors will be lobbied.

The demonstration will of course mainly consist of school students from all over London, but all school students, teachers and anyone else who is opposed to the continued use of the cane is welcome to attend.

WRITE YOUR OWN NEWSPAPER !!

Centerprise and Hackney People's Press are co-operating on a summer play-scheme again this year to produce a newspaper which will be written, designed and produced by the children on the playscheme. This was very successful last year resulting in the famous "Hackney Gasbag". The newspaper will be distributed with the September issue of HPP. The playscheme will give children plenty of opportunities to learn such skills as writing, photography, graphics and design and should be both interesting and enjoyable. Visits will be arranged to our printers and the printers of a national daily newspaper. Anyone interested should get in touch with Sue Eslick, Centerprise, 136 Kingsland High Street, E8, tel 254 9632.

OLD HACKNEY: SOME PEOPLE & PLACES

Perhaps the following article would be of some interest to the "oldies" of the borough of Hackney. One well-known character of the old times was Dr Jelly. He was of Australian descent and well-known for his kindness to the "poor mums". A sixpence in old currency was usually his charge for a consultation. He had a place on the corner of Mackintosh Lane in Homerton High Street, which was sometimes used as a kind of maternity ward. He was very eccentric and often seen on a horse. He later went round in a very dilapidated old 'banger', top hat and all. He was struck off the Medical Register and served a prison sentence for what is now a legal act. The Clapton Rink in Lower Clapton Road originally was a roller skating hall, and was later converted into a cinema showing silent films at first, then "talkies". For a nominal sum of seven or ninepence in old currency, one could see two good feature films plus stage turns, including Billy Cotton and His Band in the Lower Clapton Road. Kenning Hall Cinema, which is still in operation, used to have a very nice select orchestra playing during the performance. The Hackney Empire, now a bingo hall, used to be a theatre, where one could see artists who later on became famous in the entertainment world. One particular act was Ted and Barbara Andrews and their daughter Julie, who later became world famous in films. Julie would have been about fourteen at that time and the way that she could reach those top notes was wonderful. Barbara Andrews played the piano and Ted had a good deep voice. Others who started out in Hackney were Frankie Vaughan and Shirley Bassey. A good few years before them were G H Elliot, Marie Lloyd and the pioneers of the Big Band, Hylton and Payne. Even Enid, Jack Hylton's wife, had her own band there. You could get a good evening out for about five bob with a drink thrown in at either the Britannic next door or the Old Ship, a couple of shops away. Another interesting scene was in the Narrow Way, Mare Street, during the reign of the electric trams. It was a two-way system, but at one point only a single track, so a tram had to wait by Mathew Rose's store while the other passed through the single line. What about those cheap trips to Southend on a Saturday night for a few shillings, or a bus to Bloomsbury at five pence return? The workman's bus ticket, if bought before 7.30 am gave you a free return ride in the evening. R Hughes (age 76), De Beauvoir Estate.

round & about

The people of Hackney elected their new Council but weren't there when it met for the first time. There were three men on the door at the Town Hall on 24 May to ensure that only the faithful gained entrance. The ritual of the installation of Mayor was watched by a Council Chamber packed with invitees. Nor was the action much concerned with the people. Sam Cohen, newly chained to his office, startled some observers when he asked the Chamber to stand and remember the Six Day War, lighting a prayer candle as the Council's first political act.

If the Council has swung to the left (as we said in our last issue) then it must be watched to ensure that it is no illusion. As the first debate unfolded, the Broad Left committed the Council to the Labour manifesto - the Old Guard talked of "socialism on the basis of unity"; but again observers were left wondering where that put the people of Hackney. These were the first of presumably many hours of wrangling among the Labour ranks.

The rhetorical enmity between the front bench and the lone Tory was lost when all retired upstairs for the annual Council standing. It was here that the faithful could really gather together and celebrate old times. To the vital rhythms of the Clissold Park School Steel Band they mingled knowledgeably, smiling over their £2 a head dinners. Noticeable in small clusters and the stairs down to the toilets was the Broad Left huddled together in the cold draught of conservative camaraderie. Their talk was animated, their youth and eagerness obvious. But will we, the people of Hackney, see change?

Recently a London photographic agency received a call from someone wanting photographs on injured policemen outside the Grunwick factory. Later the customer rang back saying that the pictures he had received were really not what he wanted - they weren't savage and brutal enough. He was told that the only other ones suitable were of the Lewisham demonstration against the National Front last August. These were sent off and the customer rang back saying that the latest batch of battered and bloody policemen were exactly what was wanted.

The customer was the advertising agency, Saatchi and Saatchi. A check through the list of their clients revealed that, unless they were going to be used for some witty Schweppes bitter bitter lemon lemon commercial, they must be destined for some future advertising spectacular starring the Conservative Party.

The Guardian

While supermarkets all over the country have been vying with each other to see who can cut prices fastest (or pretend to do so, at least) good old

Marks and Spencers have been blithely increasing its prices. According to M & S boss Sir Marcus Sieff this is called "upgrading". He also said "Our food business is very, very profitable, and it is a long time since it has been as buoyant as it is now. Food sales volume is up by more than 10% on a year ago, and we have not reduced our margins at all." Nice to know that someone is still able to make a tidy profit.

Sunday Times

Hitchikers should expect to be raped according to the California Court of Appeal. In a decision that has brought a storm of protest from the women's movement, the wise (male) judges said that a woman hitchiker who was raped after hitching a lift had "less concern for the consequences than the average female". Thus they acquitted the rapist. They went on to say that "under the circumstances it would not be unreasonable for a man in the position of the defendant here to believe that the female would consent to sexual realtions." Oh really?
